For Immediate Release-November 25, 2008-Hyannis, MA- “This winter season no one gets you to your vacation destination in the Virgin Islands faster and more conveniently than Cape Air,” says airline founder and CEO Dan Wolf. “We are meeting the unprecedented demand for service by sending additional planes to the Caribbean giving us a total of 25 aircraft available to meet the hourly schedule of flights between San Juan and not only the US and British Virgin Islands but also Vieques, Cape Air’s newest island destination.”

For over a decade Cape Air, the largest independent regional airline in the United States, has been providing service between San Juan and the Virgin Islands. Wolf says this year the advance bookings have dramatically increased in response to a major reduction in service from the major carriers who used to fly to the Islands. “We expect to fly about 1,000 passengers daily between the islands this upcoming season, up about 70% from last year.” says Wolf. “In addition to the hourly service, passengers can also enjoy the seamless convenience of our ticket and baggage agreements with most major airlines including our code share partner Continental Airlines. Check your bags at your departure and find them waiting for you at your island destination.”
